THE CHARLESTON CONVENTION.

All expectation of a great gathering here is now abandoned, and there is a general feeling of disappointment at the prospect. The Mills House, which was prepared for over 1,000, has only 100 so far, and other hotels relatively few. The Northwestern delegation are provided for at the Mills House, but sleep at Hibernian Hall, a few yards distant, where 152 cots are spread in a single room.

at the Mills House, but sleep at Hibernian Hall, a few yards distant, where 132 cots are spread in a single room.

Messra, Richardson and Dyer, the two principal managers for Mr. Bouglas, resched here last unght. When they left Washington his nomination was regarded as certain. Their confidence here is less positive from the absence of the expected entinusiasm. But they remain still firm. They believe he will be nominated on the third ballot, which is a virtual surrender in the estimation of others. No friends could be more realous or faithful.

If Mr. Donglas shall fail on the first ballot, the Northwestern delegations resolved at Washington to change their front in solid column, but indicated no second choise. Several Eastern delegations are expected to co-perate in such a contingency, but cannot be relied on. They will look after their own interests.

The Douglas men claim the delegates from Maine, New Hampehire, Rhode Island, and Vermont, with parts of Massachusetts, and Connecticut, the rest of which are conceded to Mr. Toucey, complimentarily. This count is considered extravagant by well-informed persons. No safe opinion can be formed of the result till a larger number of delegates have arrived and compared opinions.

The Vice-Presidency has been held out as a bait to North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and Georgia, with some personal effect, but no decided influence. The game is well understood, and will be blocked.

A partial test will be made on the question of whether the platform or the candidate shall first

Mr. Orr is here surveying the ground, having achieved a victory at the State Convention over the ultras. With any Northern candidate for President, he would be prominent for the nomination for Vice President.

Mr. Stuart, of Michigan, is proposed, among others, for President of the Convention, but his Douglas proclivities may interfere. That selection, however, will not be considered a test of strength.

Three hundred delegates and visitors from the North-West arrived this evening, to swell
the bouglas chorus, which had become weakened.

It is believed Hother will have nearly the combined vote of the South; but no one attempts to predict the final result. Hunter's friends want the nomination first, and platform afterwards; but the Convention will not stand this. The platform will be constructed and the candidate put upon it.

Both delegations from New York arrived this evening. Mayor Wood marshals his forces. The Nofts are marshalled at present by Croswell, Coraing and Jewett. The latter are perfectly sanguine of their entire admission, to the exclusion of Wood's delegates. They have stocked the eards. and imprisoned the "saw-bone" ring-leaders, cleared the streets, and suppressed the disturbance. This action, which received the approbates of all right thinking men, brought down to all right thinking men, brought down to all right thinking men, brought down to all right thinking men, brought down there had been a public meeting in the neighborhood. I learned that there had been a disturbance meeting, in that part of North Carolina, of the old line Whigs and Americans, to choose delegates to the Baltimere Convention.

Thinking this a good opportunity to ascertain the views of the Southern opposition parties on political matters and Presidential candidates, I entered into conversation with these gentlemen. I found they were strongly for Graham, of their State, as the Baltimore nominee for President. They were confident they would carry the election in North Carolina for him or for Scott, or for any other good man of their party, by a large majority, if Douglas should be the Democratic candidate. The feeling against him is simost universal and very bitter. When I said I understood there were some of their public men friendly to Douglas' nomination, they expressed their astonishment, and said it would be the political death of any man in their Siste. They spoke kindly of Gen. Jo. Lane, felt proud of him as a native of North Carolina, and believed he would get a larger vote than any other Democrat.

On the cars from Petersburg to Weldon, I met a delegate from Pennsylvania to the Charleston Convention, a very intelligent general continuation of the sentiment of his own State. He had been in Washington a day or two, and said that he had not been in that city an hour before he was surrounded by Douglas agents. He was surprised at the activity and ubiquity of these people. He took the precaution, and told them so, to have a friend as a witness present during his interview with them, fearing that they might publish him as a Douglas man, he being anything but that, and remembering how they claimed everybody and everything. He had just heard of the case of Governor Dunning, an Indiana delegate who had been published in the Douglas organ in Washington as for Douglas first, last and forever," when it was known that Dunning had no penchant for the "Little Giant," and would brever ham him the moment he had conscientions! followed the instructions of his State Convention, and as soon as it should appear that Douglas could not be nominated. 100 slaves, and turned of 180 frishmen to make than the laborers who owned themselves.

One of these exceptions is John Henry, who, by some unacconnable mistake, once got into Congress, and there became notable by enrolling himself among the immortal few who voted against the upplies for the array in Mexico. The other exception is Gen. Murray McConnell, for many years an eminent lawyer at this bar, and lately a competitor, for the nomination, which in some supposed to be miraculous way, fell to Col. And they are very bright; sweet touches of the art that sun and sky and I won't a few days since inrough the rooms of the Boston Athensum, to see the fine collection of paintings and statues recently opened for the new season. I was delighted with the Kemble pictures, which gave me back something of that rare woman, blessom of the tender grace of wo-manhood, who bowed her sad farewell to the public last winter, leaving the world for a hundred years, at least, without a voice for Shakspeare of beauty and power such as hers hundred years, at least, without a voice for Shakspeare of beauty and power such as hers was. Allston I rejoiced in: The collection of Brown's landscapes was good to see, and the fine statuary in the lower room detained and delighted me. A famous statue of Demosthenes, and a bust of Weadell Phillips, the sweetest orator and the stoutest heart between the two oceans, I came to last, and studied long. But when I turned from them to a large south window, looking out upon an old churchyard, I found more in a few touches of nature to please the eye and the heart, than all that I had seen in stone and on canvass. in stone and on canvasa. Fresh, green grass, out of brown earth, among plain sld gravestones, flooded with warm sunlight, that was all. But it will never be painted. The fields of living green, the play of singing birds, the grace of bending grass and swaying boughs, the shimmer of broken light on the exquisite water gems of our landscape, and the music that passes forever on since the morning stars began the paslm of the eternal movements of nature, will never be seen in art galleries.

We had, a week ago, the last of our Artists' Receptions. The fine hall was profusely decorated with flowers, a vast bouquet hanging where the chandelier should be, surrounded by smaller once also hung from above. Brome baskets, filled with flowers, held the gas bursers, the bright balls of flame looking like glowing fruit within the rim of green leaves and fresh flowers. The slage was decorated with fine flowers also, filling the spaces between rare pieces of statuary. Of course the walls were fine flowers also, filling the spaces between rare pieces of statuary. Of course the walls were covered with pictures, and the hall filled with people. There were fine pictures enough for all the people, but toe many people for the pictures. Still I managed to see a good dealy though I could study nothing. Bratkett's bust of John Brown—such a head as has not been seen since Moses, led a nation of slaves to freedom—I did not need to study.

A PRISIDENTIAL PLOT DINCOVERED. — THE POSYMANTER AT CHICAGO AND THE CHARLESTO. — THE REPUBLICAN CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF ILLIZAGOS. — A gentleman from Chicago, well known in this city, where he formerly resided, and whose character for intelligence and respectability stands high, assures us that a combination between Isaac Cook, the Fostmaster at Chicago, and other Federal Officials, with the Republican leaders of Elinois, having for its object the defeat of Senator Douglas at Charles too, undoubtedly exists. The plan of these alies is as follows:

The Republican leaders of Elinois, through the Chairman of their State Central Committee, have agreed to purchase of Cook a hotel in Chicago which he owns, called the "Young and by a third party, through the district aid and sonction of the Charman of the Equilibican Chairs and the compliance of the Committee, the washington, with the fundamental aid, he will associed, and the Republican Chairman of the Repub one case an English gentleman heard of her rare skill and came with his wife to get a por-trait of a dead son. They had no likeness, but thought the artist might get an idea from the individual features in which they themselves remembered their child. The task seemed too difficult for success, and the work was at first declined. It appeared however that the father Cook's condust at Waxhington.

Tribune's Washington correspondent thus notices him there:

"Ike Cook's mode of argument against Mr.
Douglas is the offer of large bets that he will not be nominated. If he could get them taken much might be done to prevent the nomination by griding the closure distribution of the prospective proceeds.

His plan is to bet with influential delegates to the Convention whose action would be predicated upon it.

Of stuff like this, is the bullying, boasting and the work was at first declined. It appeared however that the father had been in Rome and knew a little of modeling in clay, enough to see the differences of the activative model. The knowledge of the fact encouraged Miss Foley to think that a portrait might be made. She set to work and produced an excellent likeness. The finished cameo was beyond price to the delighted parents. Miss Foley has executed a fine bust of a distinguish-ed citizen of Boston, and is now at work on a bust of Theodore Parker, which promises to be the best histeric likeness of the great heresi-arch. She is quite young, with life and fame before her, earnest and faithful, and sure of great success, though she should only find op-portunity to cut cameos.

While I am speaking of women of genius who have done faithful work in art, let me al-Witkinson, U. P. Fobes, Herman Lieb, Ansel Tupper, delegates to the State Convention. The following resolutions were passed:

An English committee, including the most distinguished radical members of Parliamedi, has recently published one of these—a tecture on the "Formation of Palico Opinion in Kegard to Woman," for gratiations distribution throughout England. This is to be issued here at once. Mrs. Dall does only faithful work, and anything which she published is worth having and worth reading. Deputy Marshal Cable, of Jefferson county, Ohio, came up this moraing on the Cleveland and Pittsburgh train, having in charge Joseph L. Ball, indicted at the present term of the United States Court for haking and pasting counterfeit coin. The arrest was made yesterday by Deputy Marshal Cable at the residence of the prisoner in Neuburgh, Jefferson county.

The arrest is one of the most important that has been made for some time. Ball is an old man—sixty years of age, and is reputed to be wealthy. He has a fine house and large farm, and ranks among the substantial men of Jefferson county. For a long time he has been suspected of being connected with an extensize gang of counterfeiters, but his position and power in the neighborhood were such that no one dared give information against him. Ball is a magistrate, and his position was used to abeliev the counterfaiters and oppress any one that was suspected of interfering with their operations. Neveral instances have been known where members of his gang have been brought before him and either released at once, in defiance of law and evidence, or sentenced in such a manner that they exceed the sternal counterfaints and oppose and the fiance of law and evidence, or sentenced in such a manner that they exceed the sternal cubble.

INCHOR OF NORTHERN ITALY.

The Sardinian Chambers were opened to day.

His Majesty entered the hall of the Senate amidst indescribable applause, and delivered the following speech:

Stracon Sanaron, Simonor Deputation—The last time I opened Parliament, amidst the troubles of Italy and the dangers of the State, faith in Divine justice encouraged me to angur well of our destiny. In a very short time an invasion was repulsed—Lombardy was freed by glorious deeds of heroism, and Central Italy became free by the marrellous virtue of its inhabitants; and thus to-day the representatives of the rights and the hopes of the nation are assembled around me. For such a benefit we are indebted to a magnantimous ally, to the valor of his and our soldiers, to the sasistance of volunteers, and to the persevering connord of the people. We ascribe the merit of it to God, as without superhuman aid such memorable enterprises cannot be accomplished. The gratitude of present and future generations is due to France for the welfare of Italy, and for consolidating the union of the two nations, who have some community in origin, principle and desting.

Italy of the Italians.

The Disturbed State of Europe-The Plans of Napoleon.

[From the London Hendid, April 2.]

The codiplications in Central Italy, and the threatened violation of the rights of Switzerland, have, to a great extent, diverted our attention from events of scarcely less interest in a quarter nearer home. At present, the danger is undeveloped. The cloud is no bigger shan a man's hand; and, in these days, when the statesmanship of English diplomatist seems to be wanting in the first requisite, foresight, it is quite possible that the peril may be everlooked, and that a few months hence we may be called upon to take sides in a fresh quarrel, and to choose between the claims of our hereditary allies and the policy of Napoleon. They greatly mistake the objects of our powerfully ally, who believe that the ceaseion of Savoy and Nice will restore peace to Europe. From North to South and from East to West of Europe there is, at this mousns, a system of intrigue being carried out, which aims at one sole end—the ascendancy of France. Hitherto the projects of the French Emperor have been only too successfully accomplished. He has put in practice the tortuous policy embodied in the old legend, "Divide et imperci," and trite though it is, appreciable as it is to the most ordinary understanding, he has contrived to blind every Power in Europe to his persistent application of its principles. He has under the serious attention of the rew which deems the serious attention of our ever with fierer resemtnent against her traditional allies than her victorious enemy. There are two Powers which he has yet to lumble before he can fully realize his ambitious dreams. These are Prussia and England, and, with Prusia, the whole of Northern Germany. At this very moment, we believe we are correct in stating that negotiations are on foot in relation to the old sore—the Schleawig Holstein question—which demmand the serious attention of our government, and on which, not improvably, may hinge the good understanding and the cordia The Disturbed State of Europe-The likely that Denmark will make further concessions. Public opinion in Germany approves of the attitude which the Diet has taken, and warmly expresses its approval of the action of the central government. Under these circumstances we learn that Denmark, as a second-rate Power, finding her means inadequate to a successful resistance against a German coalition, has been successful. France has given a favorable answer to the Cabinet of Copenhagen, and negotiations have commenced and are setively going on, with a view to the conclusion of an offensive and defensive treaty between the respective governments. The advantages that the geographical position of Denmark would afford to the Emperor Napoleon in the event of a war with Germany, are too obvious to have been overlooked by so astute a monarch as Louis Napoleon; and there is little deubt that he has folly calculated the immense assistance which the Danish navy might render, as an auxiliary, in blockading the harbors and destroying the maritime establishments and the shipping of Northern Germany. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the advances of the Cabinet of Copenhagen have been favorably responded to at Paris, and that negotiations have been extend into for the formation of an alliance between the two governments, which may find an early opportunity of mutually and efficiently supporting each other. We have good reason for stating that the rapprocement on this subject has made great progress, and that the alliance for offensive and defensive purposes will soon be an established fact.

This understanding between Denmark and France in the present conjuncture would in itself be a matter for the carnest consideration of the English Ministry; but its importance is considerably enhanced, if it be trae, as we believe it to be, that French diplomatists are buildy engaged at Stockholm in order to draw Sweden in the present conjuncture would in itself be a matter for the carnest consideration of the English Ministry; but its importance is considerably enhanced,

UNITED SYATES CAIT SALATORA,

Peace once more prevails here, although the ravages of war are fearfully evident throughout this unhappy city. The bombardment continued until the 19th with great damage to the houses, but with little loss of life; nearly all the women and children were in the castle and on board ships. We have had seventeen guests in our little ward room—ladies and children; altogether over thirty on board. Yesterday we transported them back to their homes, some of which are literally forn to pieces by the bombs and shells. I went to the house of an acquaintance, a German lady, who had been married but a fortnight, and had a beautiful house elegantly furnished. One huge bomb, fourteen inches in diameter, had exploided in the entry, after entering the wall of the house, eighteen inches thick and of stone, and entirely destroying her drawing and dining room, and two chambers, with every article of furniture in them. Her bedstead was torn in pieces hardly large enough for toothpicks. She had only risen from it twenty minutes before the firing commenced on that morning, and been hurried on board ship. My friend Mrs. — 's house had two cannon and one shell in it; the latter struck and burst nearly in the eventre of the dining-room, destroy.

Five thousand balls, shells and bombs were thrown into a city about four Philadelphia squares deep and twelve or fourteen squares loog. The loss of life was small, as for weeks families had been moving away. Still as no one imagined Miramon would bombard the city, many repashed. As many as possible of these last were carried over to the Castle after the firing commenced, and the fifteen or twenty ressels in port took as many as they could on board. The soldiers were the safest, as the shot—with the exception of those thrown against one battery—were all thrown wantonly into the city, in the hope that by destroying women and children the government would be compelled to surrender. Infamous as this was, only about ten or twelve were killed, and thirty stand and sober region. The circumstances of the case are, as next as we could ascertain, as follows:

Some two years ago, a German, named Thiele, came to this city, secompanied by a woman who was supposed to be his wife. They have ever since lived together, and have several children. When he first came he professed extreme powers and destituties, and, for several months, his family were supported at the publicexpense as reaspers. He then bought a house and tot in Hunterstown, for which he paid $500, and ioans at out about $2,000 more on interest, which him see and the second of the money it has since been ascertained he brought with him.

Official and reliable information has lately been received to the effect that when he left and the second of t

Trees, fences, brick chimneys, etc., could have been seen flying in every direction. A small child was carried at two different times quite a distance in the air, but was not seriously injured. It was blown from off a porch where it was standing. Small outhouses went tumbling about as if their weight did not acceed that of a feather. A man by the name of Love, while plowing, was instantly killed by lightning. We heard of smother that was plowing, and had both of his cattle killed, one by the lightning, and the other by the falling of a tree; the driver was uninjured.

It is almost impossible to give you a correct idea of the terror of the tornade, and the damage done. The extent of property destroyed will amount to thousands. Our village presents this morning a most "woe-begone" appearance. One or two families have been turned out of doors, and left destitute, except of what they wore upon their backs. The road leading through the timber were this morning inpassible, the falling timber obstructing them. The wherever they streak destruction was the result. wherever they struck destruction was the result.

The hardest of the storm passed southwardly, and as yet we have no tidings of the extent of the damage, but it must have been greater than just in this neighborhood.

The tornado lasted about thirty minutes. Very little rain accompanied the wind. The lightning was intense, and the thunder constantly rumbled in the heavens. Our oldest inhabitants do not recollect of a more terrific scene since their settlement upon these broad prairies.

We hear of no one killed by the hurricane, but a number injured, and hundreds narrowly escaping with their lives.

Last night our town was visited by a tornado little less destructive than that which occurred in Pans near two years ago. The cloud made in Pans near two years ago. The cloud made its appearance about five o'clock. About half past five the wind began to blow, and so great was its force that a building of James Kelley's, occupied as a drug store, some thirty-siz feel long and two stories high, was blown some five feet from its foundation, destroying a large quantity of drugs and medicines. Another house was blown down; it was owned by John W. Kelley. Thomas Black's lumber was bond over much, being piled up in his lumber yard. Some of the lumber was blown one-fourth of a mile. The methodist and Lutheran Churches were much damaged; but few houses, in this place, but received some damage; some suffered only the loss of their chimneys. Also, William B. The Fire in Vincennes—Ten Buildings Burned—Great Loss of Property.

[From the Vincennes Gassits, April 18.]

The corner building on ad and Busseron sis. was occupied by Hesse & Brother as a store and a dwelling, and when Mr. H. and lady were awakened the smoke was so dense in their wooms as to blind them, and they had to feel for their children, series them and run for their times. Mr. H. saved a part of his goods below, but his loss is at least $1,000. He was insured for $1,700. The next building was occupied by J. Davison & Son as a boot and shoe atore and a dwelling. This family was less fortunate, for they had barely time to escape with their lives, and saved very little. Loss $600. Fully insured. The next rooms were occupied by Merson. Bascom & Co. as a jewiler's shop. Their loss is about $5,000. Insured for $1,000 in City Fig. Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn. The next rooms were occupied by Chas. Seitz as confectioner's shop. His loss is about $50. No insurance. The front room of the next building was occupied by Chas. Heisiner as a tobacco store, and the back part was occupied by Mr. Thomas Eastham, as a dwelling. Their loss is about as follows: Mr. H. a $400; insured in Phoenix for $450. Mr. Eastham's $200; no insurance. A Bill for the Organization of the House.

Washington, April 17, 1860.

General Ashley, of Ohio, has a bill ready to introduce into the House to prevent a returnation of the House to prevent a returnation of the House to prevent a returnation of the House to the House to prevent a returnation of the House about the H provides for the immediate election of a chairman by a plurality rote. Section second prescribes that the only business of this chairman and the House shall be the election of a Speaker, and prohibits debate. Section third provides in the event of no election of a Speaker by Wednesday of the first week, and that a plurality shall elect. Then follow the elections of the charter officers, who, after four ineffectual ballots, shall be elected by a plurality. If such a law can constitutionally be made by one Congress to apply to the organization of the House—and some of the ablest lawyers in the country say it can—it will certainly save a wast deal of breath in the future, wherever no one party shall have a clear majority in the House.

Rev. Dr. Chapin, in his sermon of last Sunday creating, in speaking of the influence of true religion upon a man's conduct, said that it wented prevent him from breaking God's command, "Thou shalt not kill," by ongaging in a duel though he were challenged by "a twenty scre lot full of cowards and builies." Perhaps Mr. Pryor will consider the latter part of the remark rather personal.

While stopping at the City Hotel she kept herself secluded, and appeared very much afraid that the Roman Catholics among the Iriah servant girls would discover and betray her. Indeed her fears on this point amounted almost to a monomanis. At the residence of Mr. Adams she also exhibited much fear that she would be traced out and carried off to the Convent.
Every kindness was shown her by the family, and her deportment was such that they became very much interested in her. Finding that she was almost destitute of clothing, as few of the Yesterdar morning a company of Pike's Peak temigrants from Genesco, Ill., passed through our city on their way to the land of promise.—

There were six ladies in the company who were creased in pantaloons, top boots and bloomer dressed in pantaloons, top boots and bloomer dressed. They rode in a comfortable carriage and appeared to look forward to their long journey with much pleasure. They certainly have given evidence of having good sense, in dressing in such comfortable apparel. This is the best furnished company we have seen this season, and they will undoubtedly have a jolly good time on their route to the mines.—Dacenport Democrat, 121A.

This story was evidently fictitions, but let would give no other explanation. The two let for Sandusky, and since that time nothing has been heard of them.

The whole affair remains shrouded in mystery. If the girl was an imposter she made nothing by her deception, nor was there any inducement that would give a plausible reason or such an imposition. The cretinustances of the flight from the house of Mr. Adams, and her house of Mr. Adams, and we hough mysterious in themselves, scarcely contant with the idea that she was practising eception.
